Financial Aid

Financial support is available for graduate study in the School of Chemistry and Biochemistry. The usual form of financial aid for first-year graduate students is a teaching assistantship. Most students beyond their first year are appointed as research assistants. Both teaching and research assistants receive full tuition waivers and a stipend.

Additional information on the School's graduate programs is available by contacting the Graduate Coordinator at chemgrad.ask@gatech.edu (Kenyetta.johnson@chemistry.gatech.edu) or or by visiting www.chemistry.gatech.edu.
