

STUDY ABROAD

Georgia Tech sends more than 2,000 students abroad each Academic Year and offers more than 120 programs around the world. Study abroad programs span nearly every continent and academic discipline. Because students are able to take classes to fulfill their degree requirements, studying abroad gives students opportunities to improve their global competencies while meeting their academic goals.

Faculty-Led programs give students the opportunity to study as a group with faculty from Georgia Tech, with courses that are enhanced by an international experience.

Exchange programs give students the opportunity to attend international partner universities, where they take courses alongside students at the host institution and experience what it is like to study and live in another country. Students of all majors are eligible to participate in semester- or year-long exchange programs, and complete courses in English or in the language of the host country. Georgia Tech partners with more than 70 top-ranked universities around the world.

For more information on education abroad opportunities, visit oie.gatech.edu.